FOR THE UNION UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES Louisville, Ky., March 28, 1864. DEAR SIR :- I have just returned from the East, where business called me, and write mainly to recall to your recollection views which you have heard me express in relation to public affairs in Kentucky, and which I have discussed in public speeches about three repeatedly affirmed and demonstrated the

our propositions following to-wit: 1st The greatest calamity which could betall the nation and mankind in all coming generations, would be the destruction of our government and our forms of constitutional

2d The next greatest evil which could befall the nation would be the destruction of our national territorial unity.

3d. The greatest evil which could befall Kentucky would be her going into secession and rebellion against the government of the United States.

4th. The next greatest evil which could befall Kentucky would be her coming into coillsion or conflict with the Federal Government upon any pretext or under any cireumstances whatever during the pendency of the rebellion

These views I have always held and maintained. It is true that as a matter of inswritten is not intended to deceive you, and tice to Kentucky and humanity to the negroes of our State, I do not approve the wisdom of the policy of converting our slaves into soldiers. Nevertheless I hold that no State has a right to nullify the acts of Congres,s and that all should submit.

Hastily and truly, your friend, J. T. BOYLE.

TEMPARATURE OF THE SOIL.—If no other argument could be deduced in favor of un der draining, the fact that it equalizes the temperature during the season of growth would be enough to recommend it. The temperature of water issuing from under drains, as compared with the temperature of the soil at the same level, shows that during its passage it parts with heat which must rise upward. MISCELLANY.

From the New Covenant. Employment of Women. BY MRS. M. A LIVERMORE, OF CHICAGO.

Scarcely a day of our rife passes that we are not obliged to confront the question, "How shall women, dependent on their own exerations for a livelihood, find a remunerative employment?" It is daily urged upon us by soldiers' wives, widows, and children. who seek us out at the Sanitary Commission, and the Relief Association for Soldiers' Families-and we never enter the Home of the Friendless, with which we are associated, that a dozen women, placed hors de combat in their struggle with the world, and who have been received to the protecting sanctuary of the Home, till they can regain their footing, do not thrust upon us the unanswerable question, "What shall we do?"

women are exceedingly few, unremunerative, and crowded to excess. Where women are "Where did that so educated, they can teach, if a situation can be found; but the Superintendent of Schools in this city informs us that for every vacancy put: he has twenty and more applicants, equally well qualified for the coveted position, and of course nineteen or more of them must be disappointed and unemployed. Where they obtain situations, their pay is often so meager, as in this city, that it hardly suffices for tood and clothing. We have known women who have qualified themselves to serve as bookkeepers, and who have graduated from Commercial Colleges with the first honors, and been recommended by their Professors as the equal of any young gentlemen whom they have graduated-but they do not obtain employment. Bookkeeping is regarded as exclusively the business of men, and women are not to be tolerated in competition with them. We say nothing of literary employ-ments, for it is well known that literature rarely offers to the gifted and highly cultivated but a precarious livelihood.

What then shall the uneducated, the laboring class of women do for self-support? If any one supposes it is easy for this class to support themselves, we would like to turn over to him the continual female applications for employment, that come before ns in some way or other. There is sewing, which is another name for suicide or starva tion, where it is done by hand-domestic service, washing, scrubbing, taking boarders, working in shops, taking care of offices, nur ing, etc., etc. Where a woman has only herself to provide for, she can in some of these emplcyments obtain a livelihood - but how about the large class who have families of children to provide for? They cannot leave my neck. their little ones to go away from home to work by the day, or the week-and it is next to impossible to find them supporting employment in their own homes. Many s poor mother is forced by the extremity of her poverty to give her children away, rather than see them suffer from hunger and we have witnessed, has been the agony of spirit of poor women, compelled by their wretched circumstances, to give away their "Madam," sez I, "excoose me, but allow wretched circumstances, to give away their children.

A poor woman sent for us not long ago, to Her husband, a kind-hearted, but owned em scarcely. feeble, shiftless fellow, had died some weeks before, leaving her with four little children on her hands, besides this little new-comer. 'Nobody would take the baby except for love of it," the poor mother justly argued, "whoever takes it will grow to love it more and more. If I keep the baby it cannot be well cared for, as I must earn a living for the other children-if I give it away my hands will be free, and I can take care of the rest." So we found a mother and a home for the little innocent in a wealthy family, where was a great chasm made by the recent death of a dearly loved babe .take the baby down to the carriage, where six months old, an' you havn't sot eyes on its future mother awaited it-as she had stipulated that the natural mother should never know who she was or where she resided. "Good bye, little baby," said the poor wo-man, raining tears and kisses on its unconcious face; "I give you away not because I don't love you, but because I love you so much that I cannot have you suffer as we And she pacified the other weeping children by assuring them that baby would now have clothes, and a warm cradle, and be taken good care of. We sometimes advertise for homes for children-but much more frequently homes are found for them without advertising . It would startle the readers of the New Covenant should we give the fearful histories back of these advertisements-the suffering, poverty, and agony--sometimes the terrible We do not pretend to say that plenty of remunerative employment for women would remedy all the evils and wrongs existing among them-but it would do very much toward it. Let women who are com pelled to self-support, have plenty to do, and that which will yield them a living. We have no definite idea how the present disabilities of women in the way of selfsupport are to be remedied; we only know they ought to be remedied, and that their continuance infuses corruption and wide-spread demoralization throughout our social

The remedy is largely in the hands of women-and therein, we are sorry to say, lies the most discouraging feature in the matter of reform. Until American women of the better class rid themselves of the silly nonsense that labor is dishonorablethat she who earns her living as perforce lost caste, and is thenceforth to be denied th entree of the social circle-that the sumnum bonum of existence is dress, display, frivolity, gaiety and a giddy round of meaningless and flavorless pleasures-until womon are exorcised of these absurd notions, the terrible pressure on the lower classes of women will continue, and a wider and better paying range of employments will be denied them. Could we have granted for women to-day, the boon we most crave for them, it would be the right of suffragehigher educational advantages-a revision of the laws for their benefit-none of thesebut simply free access fo every department ot labor, unhindered by the opposition of man, and untrammeled by legal statutes, or the more tyrannical laws of society.

In marriage, who would not rather take to his heart a reasonable, thinking spir it, tolerating no self-influence but that o uprightness, having reliant faith, loving sympathy, and active usefulness as the only weapon for the daily warfare of crosses, per plexities and endurances, rather than a flip pant, idle, ignorant girl, who, sooner than help her mother lighten her burden of care and anxiety, is just to make weight to pull her to the earth, and to keep her there, for the mother silently thinks, "Who will mar-
